ENROLLMENT IS ABOUT 650

CONSERVATORY STUDENTS ARE NOT INCLUDED.

MORE ARE EXPECTED

Total Enrollment At State Teachers College Here Last Year was 779, Which Was Record.

With no report available on the number of students taking work exclusively in the Conservatory of Music, about 650 students are regularly enrolled in other departments of the State Teachers College, according to information given out this morning by W. A. Rickenbrode, registrar.

It is believed that the number of music students will be close to a hundred, and with this addition the total matriculation will be far better than the average for the last three years, but not so large as that of last year, when the record was made. There were 779 students at the College then.

Reports from all the teachers colleges of the state indicate that there is a shortage of students over last year. The great number of bank failures all over Missouri is given as the main reason for the drop.

The Central Missouri State Teachers College at Warrensburg has an enrollment of 800 students. This number is eighty-five short of last year, although it is better than the average for the last five years.

At Kirksville, 635 students are enrolled, according to the Index, college paper. Of this number, 200 students are freshmen.

At Cape Girardeap the enrollment is slightly lower than usual. No figures are available at present, but school authorities are quoted as saying that it is not quite up to par.

The Southwest Standard, publication of the Springfield State Teachers College, has not given the fall enrollment in either of its first two issues. It says that hundreds of students have matriculated and that there is an unusually large nnumer of freshmen.

It is well nigh impossible to compare the enrollments of the five teachers colleges because all use different standards of classification. For example, one of the institutions classifies its high school department students as special students, while another rates its music students on par with those taking academic work.

In speaking of the local enrollment today, Mr. Rickenbrode said that there will likely be a number of students who will matriculate later in the quarter. It is not at all unusual, he said, to find quite a number of persons applying in the middle of the quarter to take half-time work.

G. O. P. Headquarters To Be in Mutz Bldg.

Literature Of All Kinds Will Be Available There.—Public Invited To Visit There.

Headquarters for the Republican county committee are being established today in the Mutz building in rooms formerly occupied by Dr. L. E. Dean. The work of the campaign will be taken care of at this place. Literature, booklets and letters about the Republicans will be found there and will be sent out to the voters. The people of the country are requested when in Maryville to visit there.

Newman Club Plans Activities for Year

Twenty-one of twenty-two members were present today at a meeting of the Newman Club at the State Teachers College. A business session was held and both the social and house committees reported that they were planning a number of activities for this school term. The program committee also submitted plans for the year's programs to include music, reports on current topics, readings and other features.

The business meeting was followed by the following program:

Employment Bureau for Women Provided

Applications for Employment Will Be Listed at Restroom.—Employers Invited to Use Bureau.

Establishment of a free employment agency for women and girls in the restroom at the courthouse was announced today by Mrs. Laura Biscoe, matron at the restroom.

Frequently, Mrs. Biscoe said, women and girls have come to her to ask if she knew of any work they might get. She took the matter up with some of the clubwomen under whose auspices the restroom was established, and they agreed yesterday to finance an employment bureau.

The names of all women and girls who wish work will be listed upon their application at the restroom. Housewives and business men are invited to notify Mrs. Biscoe when they want permanent help or when they have work which can be done by women or girls.

Baby Beef and Pib Club Members Will Exhibit, and Girls Will Display Their Sewing.

One hundred or more boy and girl members of Nodaway County's 4-H clubs are expected in Maryville Saturday for their first annual "Achievement Day," under the auspices of the Nodaway County Farm Bureau.

The members of the baby beef and pig clubs will exhibit the livestock which they have been feeding so carefully all summer, and the girls will exhibit their sewing. This doesn't mean, however, that there are no girls in the baby beef and pig clubs, because there are—two of them.

The day's program will open with judging of the girls' exhibits, which will take from 10 a. m. to noon. After lunch, from 1 to 2 o'clock, the girls will hold a garment judging cotnest. The annual baby beef show, the pig show and a demonstration contest by the girls will take place between 2 and 4 o'clcok, and from 4 to 5 o'clock there will be a meeting of all club members and awarding of prizes.

In addition to the cash prizes offered, the expenses of the five winners in the baby beef show will be paid to the International Baby Beef and Pig Club Show at St. Joseph on October 5, 6 and 7, and the other calves and pigs will be sold there at auction.

In the girls divisions, attractive banners will be given for the best club display, the best judging team and the best demonstration team. Miss Lois Martin, home economics extension specialist from the University of Missouri, will judge the home economics exhibits.

Nominations were made in assembly yesterday morning and ballots for the officers were cast before noon. At 1:20 o'clock faculty members tabulating votes reported no majority to constitute an election for any office with the exception of the vice-presidensy, which resulted in favor of Miss Beatrice Puckett.

The second balloting, after elimination of nominees who received only a small number of votes, resulted in election of Petty as president and Noreen White as secretary.

Kenneth Greeson was chosen yell leader-in-chief and Miss Neva Wilkerson and Edward Deitz will be his assistants. The new student president was a star on last year's Spoofhound basketball quintet.

A report of the state convention recently held at Moberly was given by Edward W. Gray, who was elected one of the vice-comanders at the state meeting. Glen Reece, who will have charge of the Red Cross roll call in Nodaway County from Armistice day to Thanksgiving, outlined plans for the drive and asked the support of all Legionnaires.

Several musical numbers were furnished by D. A. Caldwell, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and Thomas H. Annett of the Conservatory of Music.

Drug Clerk and Bandit Wounded in Robbery

St. Louis, Sept. 28.—A St. Louis County drug clerk and a gunman were dying in a hospital here today, the result of an attempted hold-up late last night.

Malcolm Tribble, 23, clerk at a drug store, was critically wounded by the bandit when the latter attempted to hold up the store at 11 p. m. Instead of raising his hands, Tribble grabbed a revolver and began firing on the bandit. The latter also fired and both fell seriously wounded.

HAWES HERE; SPEAKS AT 8

DEMOCRATIC SENATORIAL CANDIDATE ARRIVES AT NOON.

SEES ONLY HARMONY

On the Other Hand, Republicans Are Torn By Dissension, He Asserts.—Whitsell Here Also.

Congressman Harry B. Hawes of St. Louis, accompanied by Mrs. Hawes, arrived in Maryville today at noon and will speak this evening in the circuit court room. Mr. Hawes is the Democratic candidate for United States Senator.

Dr. J. C. Whitsell of St. Joseph, Democratic candidate for congressman from this district, will also be one of the speakers at the meeting this evening. He arrived today at noon.

George K. Wallace, a correspondent of the Kansas City Star, is here to cover the meeting for his newspaper. Bon Geaslin of Kennett, Mo., also accompanied the party.

The meeting this evening will start at 8 o'clock. Shortly preceding that hour, there will be a band concert. Ellis G. Cook will be chairman of the meeting and will be presented by C. F. McCaffrey, county chairman.

Mr. Hawes, in an interview today, said:

"Democratically speaking, the situation in Missouri is more than satisfactory. In non-Presidential election years, Democrats have lost Missouri once in forty-seven years. In this campaign the spirit of harmony is everywhere apparent. Old antagonisms and factional feuds have been put aside in the interest of party solidarity. We have nothing to defend, while our opponents are forced to defend the national administration and the state administration. They are on the defensive. Their only hope will be in destroying the present harmony in the Democratic party. With our senior senator, James A. Reed, speaking for the Democratic ticket of the state and Charles M. Hay in another portion, it is quite evident the Republicans will not succeed. We have the best state organization we have had in twenty-five years.

"The farmers will not be fooled knocking at the door in Washington with their story of distress, with the Republican party in control of both branches of congress, and with a Republican President. Republican candidates will have to do one of two things, either betray Coolidge and Jardine, who are not the farmer's friend, or betray the farmer. The people of Missouri are beginning to understand that if their problems are to be solved satisfactorily, there must be a radical change in both national and state governments.

"Our Primary closed without leaving a scar. Mr. Meredith and Judge Cockrell, my opponents in the primary, are giving me cordial and active support. The situation on the Republican side is quite different, because in that primary, Mr. Williams assailed in a most unfair manner both Mr. Proctor and Mr. Priest, and his charges were made at the eleventh hour in the primary fight when it was too late for his opponents to reply. There is a very natural resentment, therefore, not only as to falsity of the charges, but as to the unsportsmanlike conduct in making the eleventh hour attack.

"I have failed to find a single Democrat, man or woman, who will be led into factional differences when there are so many big fundamental and economic questions upon which not only the party can agree but which will bring to the support of the party's nominees many thousands of Republican votes."

QUEEN MARIE ENGAGES SUITE

WILL TRAVEL ON LEVIATHAN TO UNITED STATES.

WILL TOUR AMERICA

Royal Party Has Received Number of Invitations From Governors and Mayors.—To Sail Oct. 12.

Paris, Sept. 28.—Queen Marie of Roumania today engaged through her representatives the presidential suite on the Leviathan and fifteen additional cabins for her journey. She sails for New York on October 12.

The total cost of the passage is approximately $15,000, although it is understood that the United States line has donated the presidential suite.

The royal party will travel to Cherbourg on a special train, the queen riding in President Doumergue's own private car. They will board the ship from a special tender. American warships in European waters will congregate at Cherbourg to give the queen a royal salute.

Although the Roumanian embassy still maintains she will travel incognito, Queen Marie hopes to visit at least eleven states in the Union.

Bucharest, Sept. 28.—Queen Marie's itinerary will include a large part of the United States if she accepts all the invitations from governors which she has received. These invitations, it was announced today, include ones from the governors of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Oklahoma and Alabama, and also from the mayors of Baltimore, Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Seattle and San Francisco.

An invitation from the George Washington Institute asked the queen to preside at a banquet of between 2,000 and 3,000 persons.

$4,365 Is Low Bid on New City Pump

Six Companies Submit Offers on New Equipment for Water Plant—Council Meets Again Friday

With six companies competing, the Worthington Pump and Machinery Corporation of Kansas City was low today in the bidding on a new pump to be purchased for the Maryville water system by the City Council.

The low bid was $4,365. The council however, did not accept it finally, as the ordinance authorizing purchase of a pump will not be in effect until next Monday. The council will meet again at that time, in addition to its regular monthly meeting to be held Friday night.

Other pump bids opened today were:

English Brothers, Kansas City, for a Deming pump, $5,463.

Reeves and Skinner Machinery Co., Kansas City, for an Aldrich pump, $5,370.

Southwest Pump and Machinery Co., Kansas City, for a Gould pump, $4,785.

Platt Iron Works, Dayton, Ohio, for a Smith-Vaile pump, $5,827.

Terry, Cowan and Smith, Kansas City, for a Rumsey pump, $5,000.

The Worthington Company's bid was for a pump of the same name.

The county court in session this afternoon opened bids for erecting five new bridges over the county.

The bridges to be erected are as follows:

150-foot truss bridge, west of Barnard, over drainage ditch; 120-foot bridge, near E. N. Burch farm, 1 mile west of Hopkins; 180-foot bridge over Platte river, half-mile west of Guilford; 50-foot bridge near Hayzlett school house; and 60-foot bridge near the Peters farm, three and one-fourth miles east of Skidmore.

At a late hour this afternoon the court had not accepted any of the bids.

The lowest bid received for the Barnard drainage ditch bridge was $9,186. Sam Smith and Frank Johnson of the Barnard-Bolckow district board of directors were in attendance at the court meeting.

Shenandoah Banker Arrested Yesterday

Robbery Attempt Is Charged Against E. A. Reed, Vice-President Of Closed Bank.

Shenandoah, Ia., Sept. 28.—Elbert A. Read, former vice-president of the First National Bank of Shenandoah, which was closed last May 13 by national bank examiners, was arrested here yesterday afternoon on charges of trying to enter the bank with intent to rob.

The arrest was made by Hay Scott, deputy from the Iowa state department, on information from several citizens who assert they witnessed Read's alleged attempt to break into the bank. They called local police, who reported they found Read outside a basement window of the bank building. He insists he noticed a screen had been taken from the window and went to investigate. He was taken to Clarinda for arraignment.

SMITH IN BY WILD SHOUTS

NEW YORK GOVERNOR RENOMINATED AMID TUMILT.

PLANNING FOR 1928

Democratic Leaders Looking Forward To National Convention—Mills Named By Republicans.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Governor Alfred E. Smith, idol of the Democratic party of New York state, today was renominated for governor amid scenes of wild acclaim at the closing session of the state convention here.

The governor was renominated by a vive voce vote. When Mayor James J. Walker, the permanent chairman, put the question, there was a wild shout of ayes which fairly shook the rafters.

The governor was renominated at 12:44 o'clock.

This marks the fifth time that Governor Smith has been so highly honored by his party and it breaks all previous records in New York state politics. Three times the governor has been elected and once defeated.

Democratic leaders viewed the renomination of Governor Smith as a distinct step toward his winning the presidential nomination in 1928. They predicted the governor's election this fall by the greatest vote ever cast.

Madison Square Garden, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Representative Ogden L. Mills, a prominent member of an old New York family, was nominated by the Republicans today to oppose Governor Alfred Smith, fifth-time Democratic nominee, in November.

Mills' name was the only one to go before the convention, in accordance with the prearranged plans of leaders.

Washington, Sept. 28.—With one eye on New York and the other on California, Democratic seers here are showing a worried look over recent developments and forecast resumption of the harrowing Smith-McAdoo, wet-dry and Klan-anti-Klan feud that split the last national convention at New York wide open.

Charge Super Govt. Ruled by Klansman

Indiana Editor Declares David C. Stephenson, Now In Prison, Dominated Courts and Government.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 28.—Revelation of a super-government within the state over which David C. Stephenson, at the zenith of his power as grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, held sway was promised today by Thomas Adams, head of a probe committee of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association.

The committee has been delving for months into the political activities of Stephenson, who is now serving a life sentence in the state prison in Michigan City for the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtser at Indianapolis.

Documents of an exhaustive nature, letters, pictures and other evidence have come into the possession of the committee which shows conclusively that Stephenson's "word was law in Indiana," that he manipulated appointments and forced courts to do his bidding under threat of political destruction, Adams said.

Mrs. S. E. Fisher is ill at her home northwest of Maryville. She has been suffering with appendicites since Sunday.

MORE LIBERTY BONDS TRACED

FUNDS FOUND IN ACCOUNT OF JESSE SMITH.

MERTON IS RECALLED

German Industrialist Questioned Concerning Seven-Million Dollar Claim—No More Government Witnesses.

New York, Sept. 28.—The government today traced $40,000 in Liberty bonds, part of the $391,000 paid to the late John T. King by Richard Merton, German industrialist, for having a seven-million-dollar claim approved by the alien property custodian, from the King account to that of Jesse Smith at Washington.

Smith was a friend and companion of former Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty, who is now on trial with Thomas W. Miller charged with conspiracy in approving the seven-million-dollar claim of the Swiss Society, the deal which King is alleged to have put through for Merton.

The bonds were traced to Edmond Toland, examiner at the department of justice.

After he had left the stand in federal court, United States Attorney Buckner, conducting the government's case, announced he would put no more witnesses on. Buckner has certain documentary evidence still to submit and then the government's case will be completed.

Richard Merton was recalled to the stand today so as to enable the defense to cross-examine him and permit him to sail for Germany as soon as possible. William Rand, counsel for the former alien property custodian, questioned Merton concerning the papers he had drawn up for the seven-million-dollar claim when he visited the alien property custodian's office in 1921.

Prohibition Dept. to Ask Thirteen Million

Washington, Sept. 28.—Thirteen million dollars will be requested for prohibition enforcement during the fiscal year 1928, it was said at the treasury department today. This amount, however, will not include the cost of enforcement in the department of justice, the coast guards or the bureau of customs. The budget bureau now has the appropriation bill under consideration.

May Reach Miners by 8 o'Clock This Evening

Officials Believe Some Of Imprisoned Workmen Are Yet Alive—Tapping Signals Are Heard.

Ironwood, Sept. 28.—Some of the forty-three men imprisoned since Friday noon in the pabst mine of the Oliver Mining Co., here were still alive this morning.

Mine officials this afternoon said they hoped to reach the forty-three entombed men about 8 o'clock tonight.

This was evidenced by occasional tapping on the pipe lines extending from the second level of the mine to the eighth, where forty of the entombed miners are believed to be trapped.

Rescue workers employed on the G shaft and returning for a half-hour's rest reported that the signals on the pipe line had been heard intermittently throughout the night.

Rescue is now believed to be only a matter of hours. Telegraphic communication with the miners is to be attempted. One of the entombed men understands the Morse code, mine officials said. Telegraph operators will go to the second level of the mine and send a message over the water pipes. In this manner, officials will try to determine whether the signals were from the entombed men or were only the monotonous dripping of the iron ore.

Will Go to Kansas City.

Judge E. T. Bailey of the county court, Dr. C. P. Fryer, George Brown, superintendent of the county farm, and Clun Price, left this afternoon for Kansas City where they will pick up the ne wfurniture for the infirmary building which will be ready for occupancy about Oct. 10.

THE LAND OF YOUTH.

America strikes foreigners as a place where age is no handicap, says Miss D. Kraft, of the People's University of Utrecht.

"In Holland when you reach forty years of age, everything is over. You are expected to take a back seat, and if you do not, you quickly become the victim of criticism."

Miss Kraft was much impressed with the progress of adult education here. In Holland, she says, they have adult schools, but most of the people who attend them are people already educated, wanting advanced work of some kind. The percentage of laboring people studying in the night school is small.

In American cities, adults swarm to the night schools from all trades and occupations. One college of the first class, lately established in a large city, is drawing an amazing number of parents who want courses in child-raising, household accounting and subjects similarly related directly to life.

In the smaller communities these classes are not always available. But these less crowded places have their own advantages. And it takes only backbone enough to preserve through one good book after another for adult education to progress anywhere.

It is the spirit of inquiry and the thirst for knowledge that preserves youth in the mind.

What Other Editors Say

SETTLED AT LAST.

The wrangle over evolution should end, now that Prof. Westenhofer has handed down his decision that the monkey descended from man, and not man from the moneky. That discovery explains a lot that always has been obscure to the laity. It was hard to believe human cussedness had been derived from the monkey. It is easy to believe that what cussedness the monkey possesses was inherited from human ancestors. The cables from Berlin do not make it plain whether the professor decided that the monkey ascended or descended from the parent human stock. Presumably he ascended, since the monkey appears to have got rid of the most objectionable human traits. Aside from biting off one another's fingers occasionally, the monkey family gets along together peaceably. Natural history does not record any monkey gangsters.

Of course, Prof. Westenhofer has not completed his studies. In a year or two the public may expect to hear him announce that a serious error has been committed, and humans should be kept in cages, with the monkeys on the outside feeding them bananas and peanuts.—St. Louis Star.

THE FIVE-DAY WEEK.

Henry Ford has again hit the first page with a bang with the official announcement of the five-day week as the standard for Ford workers. This is the objective which Mr. Ford has long had in mind. He has been operating on this schedule in a number of his departments for several years. His experiments apparently have vindicated his judgment to the extent at least of warranting him in inaugurating the plan throughout his varied industries.

Without detracting the slightest from his daring and vision, it may be observed that the five-day-week ideal is not original with Mr. Ford. A year or two before his death, Lord Northcliffe, the British publisher, prophesied the five-day week and, we believe, established it in some of the departments of his papers. Another Englishman, the late Lord Leverhulme, had been convinced of the economic soundness of the plan and was practicing it in a limited way. Yet with those men it was largely a theory. To Ford belongs the distinction of translating it into a fact on the prodigious scale of his imperial enterprises.

Considered historically the five-day week may be said to be a matter of evolution. It was heralded, was it not, in organized labor's first demand for the eight-hour day. It took years of agitation and many a bitter battle to put that idea over, but the idea finally prevailed because in the test of actual practice it demonstrated that labor could produce more in the eight-hour day than it could in the longer day.

One of the most obstinate adversaries of the eight-hour day, it will be recalled, was the United States Steel Corporation, which insisted that it was wholly impracticable in many of its vital operations. Public sentiment, however, at length compelled that great industry to modernize its working hours, since which United States Steel has enjoyed the greatest prosperity in its history.

Many other factors, of course, have entered into the industrial equation since the eight-hour day became the general standard. The whole technique of industry has been revolutionized. Man has been liberated from his ancient slavery. The machine has become the beast of burden. This is the age of machinery. No one can say how much the eight-hour day has contributed to the inventiveness that has changed the old order, but that it has been a ceaseless spur and constant stimulant cannot be questioned. And in no way has the genius of Henry Ford so epochally impressed itself upon his time as in his utilization of machinery. The man will live in history as the father of quantity production.

But quantity production must smother in its own abundance unless absorbed by quantity consumption. Mr. Ford seems to have recognized that truth from the outset. He has preached it from many forums. His romantic achievements have invested his words with a peculiar authority. He has practiced what he preached. This latest Rubicon he has crossed is another evidence of the courage of his conviction. The liberal world will watch the adventure with hope and expectancy.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

Washington—With the Coolidges' return to Washington, the capital will brighten up very rapidly, officially and socially.

The presidential family's arrival is the signal for cabinet members to get back from their vacations, for the big guns of the diplomatic corps to reappear at their various embassies and legations and for numerous visitors on political business to come pouring into the city for all sorts of conferences, now that the right folk are here once more, to be conferred with.

Several committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives will meet soon, too, so that there will be increased activity at the legislative as well as the executive end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Committee work will be considerably interruped until after the election, but at least a start will be made.

The Coolidges came back to a very spruce looking White House.

It's true that Maj. Grant, director of public buildings and public parks of the national capital, says the roof is liable to fall in, but superficially the executive mansion appears as substantial as any structure in Washington.

It's clean, at any rate.

If the roof holds out, the Coolidges intend to stay in it until Congress adjourns next March.

Tourists are being admitted to it again, likewise—that is, to the rooms which usually are open to the public. The whole thing was closed during the the process of renovation, with the exception of the executive offices.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

HIRAM JOHNSON

Discussion impersonalities in a more or less talkative moment, Senator Hiram Johnson insisted he had no particular hobby. The question arose over his supposed fondness for dogs.

Senator Johnson, although admitting his liking dogs, insists he is just as interested in automobile riding, hunting and reading as in the characteristics and breeding of canines.

Since 1910, when he first campaigned in a congressional contest, California's noted senator has ridden more than 165,000 miles in automobiles, and still gets a thrill out of motoring, which he says, will always remain a hobby with him. Although seldom at the wheel any more, he delights in long trips and more or less welcomes the campaign years when he tours from one end of the state to the other.

Duck hunting and chasing deer is also classified as a hobby by Senator Johnson as well as reading books. He seldom overlooks an opportunity to don boots and a hunting jacket when the duck season opens. A long motor drive and a week's hunting campaign will always offer an irresistible lure to him, he said.

Kennett—The Dunklin County Fair, which has been held annually for the past 35 years, will be conducted on October 6, 7, 8 and 9 this year. It will be largely a home-coming celebration.

Children of Today Are Best of Any

Los Angeles School Superintendent Not Worried Over Future—She Opposes College Co-Education.

Washington, Sept. 28.—The world isn't "going to the dogs," for present-day children are the keenest and brightest ever known, according to Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, Los Angeles school superintendent.

She told the United Press she believed in co-education in graded and high schools but in college—"It's too risky," she ventured.

Girl's dresses she found to be "sensible."

"Children nowadays know definately what they want and have a firm determination to pursue what they want," she said. "Their intelligence, however, makes them willing to listen to teachers.

"Parents should give their children a chance to adopt the vocation they are best suited for. Of course, all children are not born adaptable to certain vocations but the majority have definite ideas of business or professional life after they reach a reasonable age.

"Schools are to help children perfect themselves in their chosen life work and those who are not born to certain tasks are taught subjects from which they can chose later. There is no trouble to guide a child who has an ideal."

Mrs. Dorsey believes children are not as mischievious now as some years ago. Self government systems, which make children believe they are partners in the school have virtually eliminated bad boys and girls, she says.

"The present generation knows more worldly things than their forefathers, but I cannot say whether this is bad or good for them. It is up to the schools, however, to teach them self-restraint and to control environments."

Australia to Send Mission to U. S. to Study Industry as Guide to Help

Sydney, Sept. 28.—Recognition of the United States as the leader of the world in industrial matters and organization was the key-note of a speech by the Australian Prime Minister, Stanley Bruce, to the House of Representatives in which he announced that his Government had decided to send a party of Australian Industrials, representing both employers and employees, to investigate the reasons for the high standard of industrial efficiency in the United States.

"The Ministry views with concern," said Bruce, "the present condition of affairs in Australian industry. There are two outstanding questions in the present situation which have to be faced. One is the relation between the two parties in industry. The second aspect is this. Australian industry, in both its secondary and primary branches, falls below the standard of efficiency which it might attain."

Bruce said the United States was the one country in the world at the present time with a marked diminution of industrial unrest, combined with an extraordinary general prosperity.

"What this policy and this method is one cannot sum up in a phrase," he continued. "It has many aspects. There is the emphasis laid by Americans on volume of output and cheapness rather than upon the amount of the profit made on an individual article. There is a constant readiness to scrap old plant, old machines, and old methods, and to adopt the very latest and best available."

After stressing that employers and employeees must co-operate if Australia's national industrial efficiency was to be raised, Bruce concluded:

"My government stands by and is definitely committed to the principle of the minimum wage and the idea of safeguarding the working conditions of the ordinary worker. But I can put the whole matter in a nutshell by saying that we believe this principle is perfectly compatible with a great increase in production, in wages, and in standard of living and we want the representatives of both sides to go to America and see for themselves whether our contention is true.

"If the claims made on behalf of American industry are substantiated, its methods, far from threatening the standards of Australia today, will not only leave them unimpaired, but will improve upon them immensely, leaving both sides the gainers and no man the loser."

In the chorus of general approval which greeted the Government's announcement, there was a discordant note from Sydney. Employers and employees alike in all the other five States approved of the scheme. In Sydney the disapproval came from both employers and the unions.

The Sydney Chamber of Manufacturers resented the implication of Mr. Bruce that Australian industries were inefficient. This organization pleaded for a higher protective tariff, development of industries rapid enough to absorb immigration on a large scale, a consequent increase of home consumption, transport facilities that enable manufacturers to decentralize plants, keen internal competition, and ample funds for research. It favored, instead of the mission, individual effort and research, observation, imitation and experiment in each separate industry.

"A very fine picnic for which the country will have to foot the bill" was the manner in which Sydney trade union criticism was summarized.

The party will consist of four employers and four employees. The latter will be chosen by the Federal Ministry from names submitted by the unions.

OLD "TIGER" IS 85 YEARS OLD

COUNTRY'S ILLS PREVENT COMPLETE HAPPINESS.

HE IS WRITING BOOKS

Clemenceau Receives Numerous Messages of Congratulations From All Parts of World—Many Visitors.

Saint Vincent Sur Jard, Venidee, France, Sept. 28.—With the winds from the sea whipping back the warmth of summer, the old Tiger of France awoke eighty-five years old this morning.

Telegrams and letters bearing famous and obscure signatures poured in from all quarters of the globe upon the man who for France made the war and made the peace—Georges Clemenceau.

This birthday undoubtedly meant more to Clemenceau than others, for at eighty-five . . . But if it did he did not show it. The old man who reshuffled the destinies of Europe and Asia went about enjoying the evening of life as usual, at arm's length even from this little hamlet, dozing along like the oxen that pull their primitive carts.

Father Victory saw nothing to get excited about, his principal interest as usual was in the studenduous philosophical work which he is finishing, the "Evening of Thought," and on which he starts to work before dawn, directing household affairs with his picturesque Brittany cook Clothilde and his faithful valet Albert; roaming over the sand dunes by the sea; puttering about his flower garden.

And he scowled at his large mail and unusual number of telegrams that arrived for him this morning, later grumbling kindly at the peasant folk who came up from the village to wish their "vieux Tigre" many more birthdays as their most distinguished townsman.

The visitor for the first time trudging up the road to Monsieur Clemenceau's retreat would be surprised to see the little one-story peasant house squatting by the sea which is the residence of France's most famous living statesman. A canvas carp flying from a fifty-foot mast almost on the sea's edge indicates the Tiger's presence. It is said this carp was presented to the Tiger by the Mikado of Japan as indicative of strength and determination; it was well given.

The correspondent, come to interview "Pere la Victoire," asked first for Albert, for Albert is now everything to Clemenceau, his valet, his nurse, his secretary, and his confidant. When old Clothilde went to Albert, I heard the Tiger call out, "No, tell him Albert is busy, tell him to write." The Tiger does not like to be disturbed.

And when I persuaded Clothilde to take my card to him, the Tiger came out. "Oh, yes, I will see him." The Tiger is always most courteous to American visitors. Perhaps he thinks of his years as a young man in America, where he taught French in a girls' school and one of his pupils became his wife, a romance which ended in a divorce, however.

"Ah, yes, I am old, but these years have been the beautiful ones of my life." And showing his constantly gloved hands, "My hands are all dried up. J'ai fait toute la guerre. I made the entire war as a sick man. At the end, I can tell you, I was tired, very tired."

The old man, whose name is scattered throughout the pages of the history of the Third Republic, walks with the firmness of step of many men at sixty. But frequently gasps for breath tell his age. There seems to be something of the Mongol about Clemenceau, with his drooping, white moustache, which is accentuated out here in the lonely seclusion of his lair.

"And after I left power I went to India to bag some tigers," continued France's tiger. "The doctors told me I should hurry home, but I wouldn't do it until my trip was over. And since then my five years at rest in contemplation of life as I have seen it and in comparison with what I have read, have been the most beautiful part of my life."

Clemenceau took me through his house, his parlor, his "veranda," with the ground as the floor, his bedroom, from where in bed he can look out upon the sea, his two spare rooms for visitors who might be stranded in this out-of-the-awy place.

"Come," said the war premier, "if you are good, I will take you through my flower garden. I make the flowers grow with sea weeds. There are no walks in this garden, for in a garden with walks you see the same flowers every day. Here there is always a surprise."

Picking our way carefully, the Tiger pointed out flowers of almost every description, thrown together in a colorful confusion, roses, tulips, carnations, daisies, lilies, dahlias, iris, gladiolus, and many strange wild flowers.

"This is better than politics," said the Tiger, and wistfully, probably referring to the controversy over the debts, "If my country were well, I could be completely happy."

St. Louis County Is Not for Annexation

Suburbanites Don't Want to Walk a Mile for a Cop, or Have Anything to Do With Stills.

St. Louis, Sept. 28.—The city of St. Louis wants to annex all of St. Louis county. And most of St. Louis county doesn't want to be annexed. Here are some of the reasons, as shown in placards throughout the county, for the suburbanites' desire to remain suburbanites:

"We live in the county, our taxes are small. If we join the city they'll grab it all."

"If we marry the sister, handsome and tall, we marry the family, crooks and all."

"Would you walk a mile for a cop?"

"Lower tax rates, higher assessment, government, helluvafix."

"Our pleasant dales and rippling hills, or the city's trash and moonshine stills."

"From the city hall gang, O Lord, deliver us."

AIMEE WINS FIRST VICTORY

McMICHAEL FAILS TO RECOGNIZE ANGELUS TEMPLE PASTOR.

EVANGELIST SMILES

Mrs. McPherson and Mother Force Way Through Crowded Courtroom; Carmel Cottage Owner Up.

Los Angeles, Sept. 28.—Aimee Semple McPherson won her first decisive victory today at her hearing on a charge of conspiring to defeat justice when William ("Mike") McMichael, Carmel bricklayer and prosecution witness, failed to identify the Angelus Temple pastor as the woman whom he had seen at close range on five or six occasions in the yard of the Benedict cottage at Carmel.

McMichael testified that he was working on a wall adjoining the Benedict cottage during the time the pastor was said to have been there with Ormiston.

"Did you ever see the woman in the Benedict cottage?" Deputy District Attorney Forest Murray asked the witness.

The witness replied that he had and Murray then asked him to look at Mrs. McPherson.

McMichael then gazed upon the tense face of the evangelist for a few seconds and then asked her to remove her wide-brimmed black hat. Smiling, Mrs. McPherson complied and steadily kept her gaze fixed upon him.

"No, she was not the woman," McMichael declared firmly.

Mrs. McPherson breathed deeply and leaned back in her chair. Mother Kennedy patted her daughter's hand.

McMichael also failed to recognize a photograph of Ormiston as the escort of the woman at Carmel-by-the-sea.

When Mrs. McPherson and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, also being given her preliminary hearing on a charge of criminal conspiracy to defeat justice, forced their way into the courtroom through a crowd of curious spectators, both the evangelist and her mother appeared refreshed and confident.

One of the witnesses in court today was H. C. Benedict, owner of the Carmel cottage, who is expected by District Attroney Keyes to identify Mrs. McPherson as the woman he saw in the cottage with Ormiston.

Among the other witnesses called to the courtroom today were the following: Shinn Williams, a messenger boy who delivered a telegram to the cottage, Dennis Collins, garage man at Salina, who saw Ormiston and a woman companion in an automobile which drove up to his garage soon after the alleged visit of the evangelist and the radio man at Carmel.

Collins has received two letters threatening him with death if he testified, it was announced today by detective Ben Cohn. He was removed to a secret hiding place following the receipt of the threats.

The preliminary hearing of Mrs. McPherson and others also charged with criminal conspiracy will extend over a week, attorneys predicted today. Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Seilaff, who has charged Mrs. McPherson with having offered her money to produce a "Miss X," will probably be the last witness called, it was said.

Presbyterians Will Mix Fun and Music

New Violinist At College to Appear in Program Which Includes One-Act Play.

An evening of wholesome fun, interspersed with music, is promised by those in charge of the entertainment to be given at the Presbyterian Church Thursday night.

"The Obstinate Family" is a one-act comedy full of mirth-provoking situations. The part of an English maid, Lucy, will be played by Mrs. William N. Dewar, who played the same role several years ago when the play was presented by the Lakewood Dramatic Club of Chicago. Martin Lewis, jr., plays opposite her as James, the butler.

A young married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wallace, will be played by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Van Cleve. The parents of the bride, played by J. H. Knox and Mrs. Charles Haggard, bring to a climax the ludicrous position in which "The Obstinate Family" finds itself.

Floyd Lunsford has recruited a male quartet, and Miss Roma Van Zant, new instructor of violin at the State Teachers College, will make her initial appearance before the Maryville public. The complete program follows:

Male quartet, directed by Floyd Lunsford.

Comedy in one act, "The Obstinate Family."

Breaks Klan

The four-year reign of the Ku Klux Klan in Colorado state politics was broken at the recent primary when Senator Means, klan candidate, was defeated, and to Clarence C. Hamlin (above), Colorado Springs publisher, goes the distinction of having led the anti-klan fight. His influence was too much for the ticket indorsed by Dr. John Galen Locke (below), klan leader in the state.

Says Short Bread and Water Diet All Right

Many Persons Who Are Overweight Could Be Benefitted by Such Procedure, Health Expert Believes.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 28.—"So much has been said on the emotional side of the 'bread and water diet' controversy for bootleggers that a word on the health side is certainly in order," according to Dr. D. M. Griswold, former state health commissioner and now connected with the health department of Iowa University.

"Bread and water would make a fairly good diet for a short time—say ten days," Dr. Griswold said in a statement to the United Press. "Many persons who feel they are overweight have tried bread and water diet. The interesting fact remains that if they eat all the bread and drink all the water they want they do not loose weight in any alarming degree.

"With sufficient bread and water a normally healthy person will NOT lose weight or suffer any inconveniences for a period of ten days. If the person is overweight or has some digestive disorder the bread and water might be a very effective treatment.

"Careful studies made on the weight of individuals and their prospect for long life certainly shows very decidedly that a person past 30 years of age who carries any degree of overweight is carrying a liability. This liability can be turned into an asset by reducing the body weight.

"Unless some distinctly organic condition exists to contraindicate the procedure, bread and water diet for ten days would do many people a great deal of good."

MAY SEEK TO STOP FLOODS

DISCUSSION OF PROBLEM LIKELY IN NEXT CONGRESS.

A MOVEMENT STARTED

Attempt Is Made to Unite Missouri Valley States Behind Plan for Series of Dams.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Floods which have devastated districts in Kansas, Missouri, Illinois and other localities in the Missouri-Mississippi watershed have challenged interest in a comprehensive flood prevention program. As a result of this renewed interest, the next congress is likely to give serious consideration to the problem of regulating flood waters in the Missouri valley.

Late in the last session of congress, under the leadership of Representatives E. C. Ellis of Kansas City and Willis G. Sears of Omaha, a movement was started to unite the representatives from the Missouri Valley states behind a general program for flood control.

The movement progressed to the place where a general bill was introduced in the lower house by Judge Sears.

Hearings in Order.

It was introduced too late to obtain consideration, but the purpose was to have a measure pending so that committee hearings would be in order.

That these hearings will be held this winter reasonably is certain, and word received here from several Middle West representatives indicates a determined drive will be made to get action in the short session.

In the meeting held by the Middle West forces in the last congress, it was asserted flood control was related closely to the problems of making the Missouri river a dependable commercial waterway, and it was agreed that development of the flood control program should be coincident with the improvement of the Missouri river.

The tentative program included preventive measures from the headwaters of the Missouri to the mouth of the Mississippi, including the tributaries.

To Hold Back Waters.

It was submitted that a series of reservoirs and dams would make it possible to hold back flood waters and prevent property loss on the lower reaches of the rivers.

The storage of flood waters would furnish a water supply for irrigation in regions now semiarid, and the control of head water would tend to provide a deeper and more constant flow in the Missouri for navigation purposes.

It is estimated here that the flood loss in the Missouri valley this summer alone was in excess of the initial cost of such construction work as would have made the floods impossible.

Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, showed a lively interest in the agitation for flood control work in the Middle West when it was discussed with him last spring and he is expected to help materially the movement for federal legislation on a scale commensurate with the needs of the Middle West.

United Forces Seen.

If the November election makes no substantial change in the personnel of the Middle West delegations, Republicans and Democrats from the Missouri-Missippi Valley will be unitedly behind this flood control movement.

Audit of King's Books Shows Large Shortage

Bangkok, Siam., Sept. 28.—King Rama of Siam ran up a deficit of $3,750,000, and spent money at the rate of $4,500,000 a year, an audit of the royal books disclosed after his death The Siamese Government has taken over his liabilities.

The Siamese electric companies collected $500 each day from the palace meters, though the sun does daily duty in Siam and fogs are rare.

His successor, King Prachatipok, has worked out some economics and thinks he can maintain himself on slightly more than $2,500,000 each year.

"There will be a considerable saving in the electric light bills, I expect," declared Sir Edward Cook, financial advisor to the Siamese Government.

More than half of the late King Rama's liabilities were due to advances from the national Treasury made to himself at his own authorization. About three-fourths of the royal expenditure of $4,500,000 was due to payments on the King's civil list.

Name of College Paper Is Changed

The Green And White Courier Hereafter To Be Known As The Northwest Missourian.

The name of the State Teachers College newspaper has been changed from the Green and White Courier to the Northwest Missourian. An announcement published this week says:

"With this first issue of the school year 1926-27 the College weekly newspaper appears under a different name. From now on it will be known as THE NORTHWEST MISSOURIAN.

"The Green and White Courier is dead insofar as the name is concerned. It has died after twelve years of life, to be born again in what is believed to be a more accurate name to express that for which it stands.

"The College is a Northwest Missouri institution. As such it was ordained to serve Northwest Missouri. Why, then, should not the voice of the College be speak its name?

"To many the old name was meaningless. Green and White Courier was known to students and to those intimately connected with them. But to the outsider it meant nothing. Green and white are the College colors. As such they fill a certain niche in college life, which can only be their to have and to hold.

"But as the descriptive name for the college paper, Green and White Courier has failed.

"Therefore, the new name is born with this issue. THE NORTHWEST MISSOURIAN, as the voice of the Northwest Missouri State Teachers College, will endeavor to speak to Northwest Missouri. As the paper is the child of the College, even so it is the grandchild of Northwest Missouri. May it ever carry on."

M. I. A. A. RACE TO BE CLOSE

EACH OF FIVE TEAMS TOUTED AS SURE CHAMPION.

SEASON OPENS OCT. 8

Springfield and Cape Girardeau Mix Then.—Bearcats' First Conference Game October 15.

With the opening of the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association football race less than two weeks off, the teams from the five state teachers colleges are working hard and will make strong bids for the conference title.

Curiously enough, reports from each of the five towns say that backers of the teams are predicting a championship. Newspapers from Springfield, Warrensburg, Cape Girardeau, and Kirksville all speak of championship teams, and Maryville is no different in this respect.

The conference season starts on Oct. 8, when Springfield and Cape Girardeau mix at Cape Girardeau. Springfield has already demonstrated that hers is an offensive team. A week ago Monday the Bears drubbed the Southwest Baptist College eleven in a 46-to-0 game.

Springfield has a large coaching staff this year. Besides Director A. W. Briggs, there are Andy McDonald, Herbert Collins, Virgil Cheek, and Efton Henderson on the Bear line-up of mentors.

Ten letter men, headed by Capt. Dixie Davis, have reported at Springfield, and some thirty others are candidates for the team.

Eleven letter men are back at Warrensburg and Coach Tad Reid has an unusual number of former squad members and new recruits to pick from. Warrensburg has spent a large sum of money on equipment this year and is planning on a winning season.

Coach Courleux of Cape Girardeau is working with a large squad this year. He has a number of letter men back, and his line will be a beefy one. His men are working on a fairgrounds gridiron this year, but a new concrete stadium, housed in a former rock quarry, is rapidly being constructed.

At Kirksville Don Faurot has a crew of forty football candidates working daily. Of this number, one-fourth are letter men, and a number of others were on the squad last year. Bill Henderson, 165-pound halfback, will lead the Bulldogs this season.

And in Maryville prospects are also good. Coaches H. Frank Lawrence and Paul Jones have eleven letter men back with a large reserve squad.

The Maryville Bearcats won the M. I. A. A. championship last year. The year before they tied for the title with Kirksville. And this year Lawrence and Jones have as likely looking a squad as a coach could desire.

Following is the full schedule of M. I. A. A. games for this season:

Oct. 8—Springfield at Cape Girardeau.
Oct. 15—Cape Girardeau at Maryville.
Oct. 22—Maryville at Springfield. Kirksville at Cape Girardeau.
Oct. 29—Warrensburg at Springfield. Maryville at Kirksville.
Nov. 5—Kirksville at Warrensburg.
Nov. 11—Warrensburg at Maryville.
Nov. 12—Springfield at Kirksville.
Nov. 19—Cape Girardeau at Warrensburg.

TIGERS MEET STRONG TEAMS

MISSOURI OPENS WITH TULANE SATURDAY.

HAS HARD SCHEDULE

But M. U. Eleven Looks Good To Gwinn Henry, Head Coach—Fourteen Letter Men Return.

Columbia, Mo., Sept. 28.—The Missouri University Tigers, champions of the Missouri Valley Football Conference last year, are going to be real contenders for the title again this year, in the opinion of Coach Gwinn Henry.

"I am unable to prophesy the outcome of this year's Valley football—no one can do that," Henry said. "We may not win a single game, but somebody is certainly going to have to fight to beat us."

According to Henry, the Tigers will be strong on defense this year, since most of the 14 letter men returning are linemen, but the offense will depend entirely on how the new men develop, since the Tigers have lost practically their entire backfield.

"The line will be good," said Henry, "but I have lost six backfield men and two ends that would make anybody's team. The entire squad of sixty men, however, sizes up about as well and look as promising as they did last year. It is impossible to tell what kind of a team we will have until they play the first game."

Missouri's offense will depend this year on the few experienced men who played part time last year and a likely looking bunch of last year's freshmen.

"We have the hardest schedule before us that we have had in years, especially the arrangements in traveling," Henry declared. "We play Ames, West Virginia, and then Oklahoma in succession. Our out-of-conference games with Tulane, S. M. U., and West Virginia are unique in that they are with teams that are champions in their respective sections. Tulane, I have been told, has a better team back than last year, and S. M. U. has lost only four games in three years.

"Its going to lack a whole lot of being a snap."

The Tiger's schedule this year follows:

Oct. 2.—Tulane at Missouri.
Oct. 9.—Missouri at Nebraska.
Oct. 16.—Southern Methodist University at Missouri.
Oct. 23.—Missouri at Ames.
Oct. 30.—Missouri at West Virginia.
Nov. 6.—Washington at Missouri.
Nov. 20.—Kansas at Missouri.

Grid Hopes With Them

University of California expects these two chaps—Capt. Bert Griffin (left) and Coach "Nibs" Price—to bring back the Pacific coast football championship which went to the University of Washington last season. Price was assistant to Andy Smith last fall. With the death of Smith, Price assumed full charge of the Golden Bear candidates. Griffin plays in the backfield and is an all-round star.

Big Series at St. Louis Attracted Baseball Fans From Throughout Middle West.

St. Louis, Sept. 28. — Twenty-seven thousand tickets and 60,000 rejected applications for tickets to the world series games between the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees, here Oct. 5, 6 and 7, were mailed today.

All of the 27,000 tickets mailed called for reserved seats. Eleven thousand pavilion, bleacher and field seats will be sold the day of each game.

President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals estimated that 40,000 fans will see each game. Five thousand temporary seats have been constructed in an attempt to take care of as much of the crowd as possible.

"I have received more than 200 congratulatory telegrams since the pennant winning game. I even had to have my telephone disconnected. The fans would not let me sleep.

"I am certainly proud of the organization that brings a World Series to St. Louis. My seventh season as president of the Red Birds has been a truly happy one."

The VANITY CASE

by Carolyn Wells

NEA FICTION

© 1926 by G·P·PUTNAM SONS

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

In Harbor Gardens, Long Island, in an elaborte bungalow, lived PERRY HEATH and his wife, MYRA.

At the time the story opens the Heaths were entertaining as house guests:

LAWRENCE INMAN, a distant relative of Myra's and, aside from Perry, the only heir to her considerable fortune, and

Myra Heath was a peculiar woman. She was cold, sarcastic. She did not love her husband, but seemed enamored of Inman. She never used cosmetics or dressed in colors. In fact, her hatred of color amounted to a passion. She collected rare old bottles and her latest was a whisky bottle which she was quite proud of but which aroused her artistic husband to scorn.

There is a growing intimacy between Perry Heath and Bunny. Myra, becoming provoked, declares that she has made her will in favor of Inman, cutting Perry off.

That night, after Bunny and Inman retire, Myra Heath alludes mysteriously to Perry's "secret." When Perry goes to bed, Inman comes down stairs, and he and Myra are discovered in each other's arms later by Perry.

The next morning, Mrs. Prentiss, who lives next door, was telling her nephew, Todhunter Buck, of some mysterious lights she had seen the night before in the Heath bungalow. While they are talking a loud scream from the Heath home interrupts their conversation.

That night Perry Heath, stealing downstairs, discovers his wife in Inman's arms and orders the latter out of the house by morning.

The next day the body of Myra Heath is found in the studio by a servant. A candle is burning at her head and feet, there is a big cut in her head and, strangest of all, her face is made up with cosmetics and she is dressed in outlandish colors.

HERRICK, the butler, after calling the doctor, steals some money from a drawer near the body and then dis- "The Work of Perry Heath."

The doctor, when he comes, finds covers, at Myra's feet, a card marked, that the death blow was struck with Myra's cherished whisky bottle. It is discovered then that Perry Heath is gone, his bed unslept in.

She has been killed by a blow with her cherished whisky bottle. When the coroner comes, Inman and Bunny are strangely nervous when made to answer questions. Meanwhile, at the Country Club the murder is the topic of conversation among SAM ANDERSON, AL CUNNINGHAM and others. MRS. PRENTISS, towing her nephew, TODHUNTER BUCK, goes over to the Heaths and invites Bunny to stay at her house next door. Bunny breaks out crying and Buck, at sight of her beauty, is her slave.

Mrs. Prentiss relates having seen mysterious lights appear and disappear, the night before, in the Heath home, and at the inquest testimony brings out the fact that Bunny Moore knew of the murder before the maid, who went to her room to inform her.

Finger prints of Inman and Bunny Moore are found on the bottle, and the coroner declares his belief that the murderer will be found in the household. Inman relates having seen a vanity case near the body, but that has disappeared. Physicians declare the rouge was applied to Myra Heath's face after death.

At the Country Club the murder is discussed by SAM ANDERSON, AL CUNNINGHAM, who is trying to solve the mystery, and others, some believing Perry Heath the murderer, others disagreeing. Cunningham suspects Bunny Moore is concealing something, calls on Mrs. Prentiss, who tells him about the mysterious lights. TODHUNTER BUCK, her nephew, suggests that Heath also may have been murdered.

EMMA, a waitress in the Heath home, tells DETECTIVE MOTT of seeing Bunny Moore ascend the stairs after the murder, her vanity case in her hand.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII.

"You see," Mott said, breaking the silence that had fallen, "Osborn gave me a tip about Miss Moore. A pretty serious one. He asked her a string of questions early this morning, before she had time to make up anything. Well, he asked her if she saw the two candles burning, at the head and feet of Mrs. Heath. And Miss Moore said she did. Now, you see, when Miss Moore came downstairs, and went to the studio to look on the body of Mrs. Heath, for the first time, after Carter had told her the news, Doctor Conklin was there, and the two went in practically at the same time."

"Well?" said Cunningham, as Mott paused.

"Well, then the candles had gone out—burnt out, you know—but they were out. Now, Miss Moore agreed, when Osborn referred to her seeing the candles burning. When did she see those candles burning?"

Cunningham looked thoughtful.

"If that Emma person's story is true," he said, "then Miss Moore was downstairs, just before one-thirty—"

"And went upstairs, with her vanity case, at half past one," declared Mott. "Having either been down and viewed the dead woman—or, having been either principal or accessory to the fact of her death."

He put the case so simply, and in a tone so devoid of real accusation, that Toddy Buck, at first inclined to deny vigorously Bunny's possible connection with the crime, thought better of that, and said slowly:

"You suspect the girl, then, Mr. Mott?"

"Suspect is too strong a word, Mr. Buck. But I do think some parts of her story call for investigation, and I think she knows more than she has told."

"She certainly does, if she was downstairs at half past one o'clock," Cunningham said, in a tense, strained voice. "Yet the doctors agree that Mrs. Heath died about two o'clock. It may be, therefore, that Miss Moore was down there, that in a spirit of fun, the two women made use of Miss Moore's vanity box, and that Mrs. Heath was party to the making up of her own face."

"No, Mr. Cunningham," Mott said, "that won't do. The doctors proved that the make-up was put on Mrs. Heath's face after death. Of that they are certain. As to the time of death, that is not an easy matter to state positively. I have seen many cases, where the doctor has been out two or three hours in his reckoning regarding that matter. They can't tell exactly. The best of them admit that."

"Then, what do we gather from Miss Moore's presence on the stairs at half past one, and her denial of it?" asked Cunningham, gravely.

"That we can't decide about, until we question Miss Moore further," Toddy Buck broke in, his young face aglow with interest. "I've only met Miss Moore today. You fellows doubtless think that because of her beauty, I've fallen in love with her. I don't say that I have or haven't, but I do think she is a helpless girl with a lot of possible or apparent evidence against her. And, I propose to take up her cause, and carry on for her, till I find out the truth of the affair. To imagine for a moment, that that baby-faced chit committed a murder is just too ridiculous! But a lot of hard-boiled detectives may think differently. And so, unbiased by any prejudice in Miss Moore's favor, I'm going to do all I can to see that justice is done her. That's all."

"You're fortunate in having her under your own present rooftree," Mott said a little dryly.

"I am," Buck agreed, courteously, and without a smile. "She is now under my aunt's protection, as far as gossip and slander are concerned. If she should prove to be mixed up in this thing, other than as an innocent onlooker, I shall be greatly surprised. But, anyway, I'm going to get at the truth if I can—"

"Let the chips fall where they may?" asked Cunningham.

"Yes," Toddy said, "where they may."

"All right," Mott said, heartily, "you're the right stuff, young man. If you don't fall too hard for the charms of the Moore Baby, we'll find you a valuable assistant, I'm sure."

The three men separated for the night, Mott declaring that he meant to sleep on the matter, and Toddy, his young heart full of food for thought to toss for hours on a sleepless couch.

But Al Cunningham went across the bridge, and over to the Clubhouse in Harbor Park.

It was not so much that he felt it his duty to report at once to his employers, but he was full of the subject and hoped to find some one at the club with whom he could talk over things. It was not late, from the viewpoint of the club members, although many of the Gardens bungalows were dark as he walked by.

The walk seemed short, for Cunningham had much to think about, and when he reached the clubhouse, he found, as he had thought, a goodly number of men playing bridge or billiards, or sitting in desultory chat in the smoking lounge.

Of the ones who were really his employers, Cunningham found Arthur Black and Sam Anderson in confab.

"Hello, Cunny," called out the latter, "what have you found out regarding the Heath matter?" We're pretty curious about it over here."

"There are developments," Cunningham returned, as he took a seat near them, and lighted a cigaret. Then he told them all he knew of the affair, dilating on the recent facts they had learned which implicated or seemed to implicate the lovely Miss Moore.

"Ridiculous!" cried Anderson "That Moore Baby couldn't harm a fly!"

"Do you know her?" asked Black.

"Oh, not to say know her, exactly, but I've seen her now and then. She came over here once in a while with Mrs. Heath for the club dances, and though I never was introduced to the chit, I couldn't help seeing her and admiring her as one would a pretty butterfly. I'm not the sort to have to do with the youngsters, but I have a spark of perception, and if that infant in arms could kill a woman—"

"Oh, Lord, Anderson," Cunningham broke in, "nobody is accusing the child of murder, but we must admit if she was going slowly upstairs, carrying her vanity case, at half past one, she must have known something."

"Yes, I suppose so," Anderson agreed. "But what I want you to do, Cunny, is to find out who was the murderer, and to find out where Perry Heath is. I can't help thinking the two mysteries are connected."

"Connected? Of course, they are," Black declared. "If the little girl knows anything, she ought to be made to tell. But the mystery ought to be solved without her help, no matter how often she ran up and down stairs."

Meantime the subject of their discussion, the uncertain and mysterious Bunny, was lying in her little bed in Mrs. Prentiss' best guest room, staring wide-eyed at the ceiling.

She wondered why Cunningham had taken her gold vanity case, and whether she would ever get it back.

Restlessly she turned and twisted, sometimes getting up and sitting by the window, and again, turning on the light and trying to read.

At last, as she had returned to bed, and was about to drop into a real sleep, there was a light tap on her door, and she sprang up and opened it, to see Mrs. Prentiss in boudoir cap and gown.

"My dear," she whispered, "there's a call for you on the telephone. A man's voice, but he won't give his name. Says it's important he should speak to you."

"Mr. Inman, probably," said Bunny, as she slipped her bare feet into her little silk mules.

A few moments later, she took up the telephone receiver, and heard, to her stunned amazement, the voice of Perry Heath.

"Hush!" he said, softly; "don't make a row. I only want to tell you to watch your step. I can't advise you definitely or particularly, but just be non-committal, taciturn, uncommunicative—all those things. In other words, keep your trap shut! See?"

"No, I don't see at all! Where are you? What do you know? Why don't you come home?"

"Never mind all that. You mind what I say, or you'll be everlastingly sorry." And with that, the voice ceased.

BRAINWORK RETARDED BY PHYSICAL ILLS

Boys and Girls Who Are Going to Higher Centers of Learning This Fall Should First Know How to Have Efficient Bodies.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator From New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

This is the time of year when the boys and girls return to school. This is the time of year when the young men and maidens go to college. I wonder what proportion of the young people seeking educational advancement are physically prepared for the burdens they must carry.

The thing I want to impress upon each of you who will go to school this Fall, and upon the parents as well, is that it is important to begin the school year with a sound body.

Let us begin with the feet. You cannot study if your feet hurt you. Not everybody knows how to take care of the toe-nails. If you have an ingrowing toenail or a bunion or sensitiveness of the feet, go to a pediatrist or a chiropodist or a surgical specialist and find out what is wrong. Have your feet in good condition, because they are fundamental to an upstanding and comfortable body. Wear sensible shoes. Change the stockings frequently. Bathe the feet every day and keep them in the pink of condition.

What about your teeth? Have you any cavities or sensitiveness of the gums? Let your dentist look you over and see if your mouth is in proper condition. The mouth may be like a rose-bud or it may be a cesspool. You must have clean teeth and a clean tongue in order to have good health.

What about the tonsils and nasal cavities? Are they free from disease and functioning as they should?

You can't get much good out of your schooling if you can't hear what is said to you. Once in a while it is a good thing to have the ears examined to see if there is any hardened wax in the canal or any difficulty which needs attention.

Now I come to the eyes. They must be exactly right or your educational ambitions will go awry. Stupidity in the school is more likely to be due to faulty eyesight than to lack of mental development. Many a child who has failed to progress in school has had glasses fitted and has made three grades in one year. His stupidity disappears and actual brilliance may be noted by his teachers.

Just because a child can see well at a distance is not proof conclusive that his eyesight is normal. He may see well looking at distant objects and suffer eyestrain when attempting to read or study.

Even though the vision is sharp, the eye muscles may not be properly balanced. On this account there may be strain and inability to make close application to the studies.

Keep the body clean and the finger nails free from dirt and impurities. Wash the hands at frequent intervals. Keep the hands from the face. Never put pencils or rulers or other things in the mouth.

It isn't necessary to have all the diseases that are found in schools and colleges. Attention to the well-being of the body ill build up powers of resistance which will make it possible to escape infections and common illness.

Make sure you are in "apple-pie" order. Then you can begin your school year confident that it will widen the boundaries of your knowledge and prepare you for life's battle.

Answer To Health Queries.

Be A Profiting Partner

Every year sees the demand for gas and electric service expanding. The year 1925 established new records in the amount of electricity and gas used in the United States, in the amount of capital invested, and in the diversity of uses to which gas and electricity may be put.

Gas and electricity have become necessities in our homes and industries. They have come to form one of the most important links in our daily existence.

So long as life continues—so long as day is succeeded by night—so long as present sources of energy predominate—the business of the gas and electric companies should continue and expand.

By investing your savings in the 6.36% Prior Preferred Shares of the United Light & Railways Company you will become a profiting partner in this growing business.

HOW THE PILGRIM MOTHER

Kept Her Family in Good Health

A statue to the Pilgrim Mother was recently unveiled at Plymouth Rock, Mass. Through her we honor every pioneer woman who endured privation and hardships that a nation might live. Shoulder to shoulder with her husband she built a home in the wilderness and reared her sturdy sons and daughters. She cooked and sewed. She spun and wove for her growing family and when they were ill, she brewed potent remedies from roots and herbs—such roots and herbs as are now used in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Massachusetts woman writes: "I was all run-down, with no ambition. I was tired all the time. Sometimes I would be in bed two or three days at a time, and the doctor would have to give me something to quiet me. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have had wonderful results from it. I felt better after taking the second bottle, and I am never without it in the house now. I have told lots of people about it, and they say it helps them, too. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. J. W. Critchett, 2 Hammond Street, Cambridge, Mass.

Centerville, Ia., Now Has the One Paper

The Centerville, Ia., Iowegian and Citizen purchased under mortgage foreclosure Sept. 7 the Southern Iowa American and Centerville joins the class of one newspaper towns of Iowa. According to an editorial announcement in the Iowegian & Citizen, it says in part:

The purchase of the Southern Iowa American newspaper plant by the Iowegian & Citizen brings about a consolidation that puts Centerville in a class with practically every progressive and growing city in the state and the middle west, up to 25,000 population. Not a city in Iowa under that population has more than one daily newspaper, and most such cities have but one newspaper of any description, daily or weekly. For example the following cities in Iowa near the size of Centerville or larger have but one daily newspaper: Creston, Fairfield, Washington, Fort Madison, Keokuk, Muscatine, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, Newton, Webster City, Boone, Charles City, Marshalltown, Ft. Dodge, Mason City and Council Bluffs. Only eight cities in all Iowa have two daily newspapers, all of them cities more than three times as large as Centerville. They are: Burlington, Davenport, Clinton, Dubuque, Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, Sioux City and Des Moines.

Kansas City Stock Yards, Sept. 28, 1926.

Cattle Uneven; Hogs Up; Lambs Off.

The cattle market showed considerable uneveness. Prices were quoted steady to 25 cents lower. The better grades of fed, wintered and grass fat kinds were steady, while the snappy grassers showed the full 25 cent decline. Grain fed classes were in moderate supply. Light weight stockers were steady. Hog prices were 10 to 25 cents higher with the largest advance in the medium weights. Heavies sold more readily than the lighter weights. Lambs were 15 to 25 cents under last weeks close and sheep were steady. Most of the offerings were western lambs.

Today's Receipts.

Receipts today were 32,000 cattle, 5,000 hogs, and 19,000 sheep, compared with 44,000 cattle, 6,500 hogs, and 23,000 sheep a week ago, and 37,225 cattle, 7,725 hogs and 14,350 sheep a year ago.

Beef Cattle.

Good to choice fat steers were fully steady. Other kinds were weak to 25 cents lower with a heavy tone in the trade. Chicago had another heavy run, principally fat cattle and quoted the market in a further slump. The per cent of fat cattle here was small, and the per cent of stockers and feeders large. The top price for the day, $12, was paid for 918-pound steers and heifers mixed. Other good to choice corn fed steers brought $10.75 to $11.75, with medium weights up to $11.50 and heavies up to $11.25. Short fed steers sold at $9 to $10.25; wintered summer grazed steers, $8.50 to $10, and straight grass steers $5.50 to $8.75, mostly $7.25 to $8.50. Cows and heifers were steady and in fairly active demand. The per cent of female cattle continues unusually small. Most of the cows sold at $5 to $6, with canners and cutters $3.60 to $4.50. Grass fat heifers brought $5.50 to $8. Veal calves were strong, best selling up to $13.

Stockers And Feeders.

More light weight stockers were offered today than for some time past, and prices for them ruled firm. Fleshy feeders and the plain quality stockers sold slowly at weak prices. Demand will increase with more settled weather.

Hogs.

An uneven advance in hogs to the medium weight grades into a premium position for the first time this year, and light and heavy weights sold at about the same price range. This change has narrowed the price spread materially. The 180 to 230-pound classes brought $13.15 to $13.45; 230 to 260-pounds $12.85 to $13.15; 140 to 179-pounds $12.60 to $13; 260 to 325-pounds $12.25 to $13; packing sows, $10.50 to $11.25; stock hogs and pigs $13.25 to $14.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep were steady but lambs were quoted off 15 to 25 cents. At the decline trade was active and a close clearance was reported. The good to choice western lambs which make up the bulk of the offerings, brought $13.25 to $13.60. Native lambs sold at $12 to $13; ewes $4.50 to $6.50; wethers $7.25 to $8.25, and feeding lambs $12 to $13.

Horses and Mules.

Demand for horses and mules continues active at firm prices.

Market Correspondent.

An Independent Candidate in Illinois

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Hugh S. Magill, former state senator and general secretary of the National Council of Religious Education, was put forward as an independent candidate for United States senator yesterday when his friends started circulating a petition in his behalf.

His candidacy, an announcement said, is the result of a revolt against both major party nominees, Frank L. Smith, Republican, and George E. Brennan, Democrat, that had its origin in the senate investigation of primary campaign funds contributions that revealed both Smith and Brennan had accepted campaign funds from a public utilities head.

St. Louis—When it was announced the Cardinals had won the pennant, this city indulged in a celebration like that of Armistice Day. World series games will be played here October 5, 6 and 7.

CLOSING GRAIN REVIEW.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—The foreign angle of the wheat situation was the dominant factor in the price bulge that featured today's session on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Sharply higher Liverpool cables and an export business placed at a million bushels, the largest in many weeks, outweighed Canadian news and local bearish sentiment. Wheat closed ¼ to ⅝ cent higher than yesterday.

Corn rallied with wheat. The cash price was unchanged to 1 cent higher.

Oats were firm, drawing strength from wheat.

Provisions lost a few points on the lower hog market.

G. O. P. Will Center Fight on Reed

Republicans Are Said Will Seek to Stir up Old Controversy, St. Louis Paper Says.

St. Louis, Sept. 28.—A campaign which would picture Senator James A. Reed as the leader of the Democratic party in Missouri, and a discussion of the official record of Harry B. Hawes, Democratic nominee for the United States senate in the November election, was favored here yesterday in a meeting of members of the executive committee of the Republican state committee.

Final decision on the status of the campaign will be left to Senator George H. Williams, Republican candidate for re-election, it was announced.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat tomorrow will say that the purpose of discussing Senator Reed and his connection with the Democratic party in Missouri, is to reopen, if possible, the Reed and anti-Reed situation in the campaign of 1922.

WOMAN BEST HOG CALLER

MRS. CLAUDE SEWELL WINS CONTEST AT GRAHAM.

CAN ENTICE 'EM AWAY

When A Hog Leaves His Dinner, It's A Powerful Call.—Other Winners At Community Fair.

Unless some new prodigy arises to contest the honor with her, Mrs. Claude Sewell of Graham will wear the crown of champion hog caller of Nodaway County.

Mrs. Sewell, with a vigorous "Whoo-oo-oo-ie, poogie, poo-oo-gie, poo-oo-oo-gie!" won the title in a competition which was one of the features of the School and Community Fair held at Graham Friday and Saturday.

Of Mrs. Sewell it is said that she not only can call hogs to their dinner, but she can call 'em away from their dinner—and that is the acme of hog calling. Mrs. Sewell doesn't exercise her talent very often because the neighbors for several miles around dislike having to repair their fences where their own hogs try to clamber over to answer Mrs. Sewell's call.

Once, it is declared, Mrs. Sewell came to Maryville and then remembered that she had put out the hogs' dinner but had forgotten to call them. She gave out a mild call from here and went about her shopping. Starting home a few minutes later, she and Mr. Sewell had gone but a short distance when they met every hog from the Graham vicinity racing madly toward Maryville.

Another's Call Melodious.

Mrs. Saut Kaufman was a close second and Jake Eckles trailed along in third place. Mrs. Kaufman's call, it was stated, had a melodious quality, which made 300-pound porkers forget their worldly cares and frisk about like gay, suckling lambs. When it was discovered, however, that the hogs weighed but 275 pounds at the end of their frolic, the judges decided that Mrs. Kaufman's siren-like invitation was hardly practical and so she had to be content with second place.

Eckles was th best of the men contestants, but the judges ruled that his call had neither the melody nor the "appeal" of the two women contestants.

A feature ranking close to the hog calling was a chicken calling contest, in which Mrs. Clyde Goodpasture won first.

Mrs. Goodpasture was another popular winner. When she gave vent to her "CHICK, Chick; chick, chick, chick, CHICK, Chick, chick, chick, chick—CHEE-EE-EEKIE, CHEE-EE-EEKIE, CHEE-EE-EEKIE," there was such a darkening of the sky that everyone ran for smoked glasses, thinking there had been an eclipse. But it soon developed that the cloud was composed of chickens flying to answer Mrs. Goodpasture's call. Even hens whose wings had been clipped came flying—and then had to be carried home.

Hogs Ruin Her Chances.

Mrs. John Wilson was second in the chicken calling contest, and Mrs. Claude Sewell showed her versatility by taking third. Mrs. Sewell might have won this contest, too, but the darn fool hogs thought she was still calling them and responded again, gobbling up several chickens on the way. The judges ruled that the contestants had to have selectivity as well as the other qualifications.

The women further demonstrated their superiority when Mrs. John Hopkins won the old fiddlers' contest, with Carl Hunt second and Hugh Lyle third.

A horseshoe pitching contest ended with George Kinney as singles champion and Ray Marcus and Frank Kettering supreme in doubles.

School booths at the Graham fair were unusually good. First prize was won by the Elkhorn district; second by Hickory Grove, in the Graham consolidated district; and third by Lyle school, also in the consolidated district.

For the best school project, first prize was awarded to the primary and the third and fourth grades of the Graham school, with Hickory Grove second and and Hayzlett third.

12-Year-Old Hen Is Now Getting Feeble

Kirksville, Mo., Sept. 28.—A. P. Hopkin's 1-year-old hen is geeting feeble.

Mr. Hopkins says that the hen, believed to be the oldest in the state, has laid 60 eggs this year. She is still laying, he says, although she has been losing strength rapidly the last few weeks. Hopkins, declares, however, that she still retains her good disposition.

The hen is from pure strains of Brown Leghorn and Rhode Island Red fowls.
